From Terry Tyrrell

St. Catherine of Sienna, a lay member of the Dominican Order, famously wrote, "Be who God meant you to be and you will set the world on fire." I can't think of a more perfect illustration of our mission here at Catholic Central: providing students the tools to discover their unique gifts from God and preparing them to change the world through their specific calling. Thousands of Catholic Central alumni have received this call to serve as a man or woman for others.

This call to service is at the forefront of our new strategic plan, "Ignite Our Future: a bold vision for mission and ministry," which you will read about on pages 4-5. The plan brings to life a vision of encountership with Christ, access for all, innovation in new programming, and excellence in mission delivery at Catholic Central. It builds on the school's successful past and will ensure that generations of future students will be formed to be creative, compassionate, complex problem solvers for the greater glory of God.

In my journey with Catholic spirituality, I have often been implored to ask myself, "What does God want from me?" I have spent my adult life both answering this question for myself and, with our faculty and staff, trying to help our students answer it for themselves. Each young man and woman we serve possesses unique gifts; our responsibility is to help them identify, develop, and use these gifts in the service of others and the Kingdom of God.

Thank you for partnering with us in the wonderful work of forming Catholic Central students. The support of our community is essential to our mission and service to our students.

In Christ,

Terry Tyrrell

This is an exciting time in the history of Catholic Central!

We are proud to share Catholic Central's new mission statement and strategic plan.

Enrollment is up for the first time in five years, we are coming off of a record fundraising year in 2021-22, and exciting new programs are being created for our students, including our new Kairos retreat program, Career Connections, and our Department of Innovation. Along with these exciting advancements we are proud to share Catholic Central's new mission statement and strategic plan. We are hopeful that both integral elements will allow us to continue our goal of being the "best at getting better."

We will continue to share the outcomes of the strategic plans and invite you to celebrate with us as we reach our goals.

Mission Statement

Catholic Central High School is an inclusive community rooted in the Catholic faith that prepares servant-leaders for a Christ-centered life.

Our new mission statement strives to encompass and reflect the important work our administration, faculty, and staff are doing to make a Catholic education accessible for all students. At the heart of everything we do (academics, house system, extra-curricular activities, etc), we seek to give students a foundation that will help them live a life focused on Christ. We are thankful that a Catholic education means we are able to deliver an excellent education, while also building and fostering a foundation in which our students will become who they are called to be.

Thank you. We appreciate the support and continued prayers from our Catholic Central community. You truly make a difference in the lives of our students. We encourage you to stay connected and engaged as we embark on this exciting journey at Catholic Central.

There's no place like Ukraine

Austin Malloy '00 has been all over the world, but Ukraine holds a special place in his heart.

After Austin Malloy graduated from Catholic Central in 2000, he went to Ferris State on a football scholarship. Once he realized that he wasn't working towards a football career, he decided to study abroad. While living in Denmark for a year, his passion for travel and the study of other cultures was ignited, thus beginning his winding road to Ukraine. I called Austin to talk about his time in Ukraine, but much to my surprise, his journey getting there was just as interesting; you can read about it below.

2004-2005: Studied abroad at the University of Copenhagen.

2005-2008: Transferred to GVSU's Russian Studies program and became fascinated with Russian culture, politics, history, and language.

2006: Studied abroad in St. Petersburg, Russia.

2008-2011: Completed a graduate program, on full scholarship, at the Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies at the University of Washington. Studied security affairs and politics of Russia and the Post-Soviet region.

2009-2010: Received scholarships to study Russian at Moscow University and at Indiana University.

2011-2014: Worked in Moscow as a multimedia journalist. Began visiting Ukraine and immediately felt a connection with the country, its language, and its people. Witnessed the Maidon Revolution first hand.

2014: Moved back to the states and took a job at Northwood University, helping to build their International Studies Program.

2015-2018: Moved to Beijing, China and worked as a liaison between universities in China and America. Traveled to Ukraine on long holidays to help with various humanitarian projects.

2018-2022: Moved to Kyiv, Ukraine to work as a multimedia journalist for the Kyiv Post, an English-language publication covering Ukrainian politics.

2022: Austin's wife took a job in Geneva, Switzerland. He is currently living there while working as a multimedia journalist for Radio Free Europe, which is based in Prague, Czech Republic.

Austin's Humanitarian Projects in Ukraine

Since 2016, Austin has been running fundraisers and helping to coordinate humanitarian efforts on the ground in Ukraine in response to the ongoing conflict between Russia and Ukraine.

• Zaitseve, Ukraine: He raised money to turn a dilapidated floor of a local building into a school after the only school near the village had been bombed out.

• Troitske, Ukraine: He worked to send all the kids in the village to Western Ukraine for physical and mental rehabilitation. Some of the money he raised helped to send Ukrainian children to summer camps.

• When Russia invaded Ukraine in February many of his former colleagues became first responders. Austin raised money for equipment to send to them: bulletproof vests, flashlights. tourniquets, etc. Much of the money he raised went to repair two vehicles that were being used to evacuate civilians as well as transport food and other supplies.

In Austin's Own Words

What is it about Ukraine that has captured your attention and love?
It's the spirit of the people that I love most. I think that started during the Maidan Revolution, when I saw how determined Ukrainians were in their fight for freedom.

What have all of your travels taught you?
There's the cliche that everybody wants the same thing. One of my graduate school professors once said to me–and I find this to be true–when you start traveling and seeing other cultures, first, you realize that we're all the same. And that's wrong. And then you realize that we're all different. And that's wrong. And then you realize that we're all the same. And that's right.

What advice do you have for our most recent graduates?
Travel, go see the world, go experience different cultures, and go into it with an open mind.

If you're interested in supporting humanitarian efforts like the ones Austin organized, he recommends donating to Voices of Children, a charitable foundation run by a friend of his:

5 Questions with Caryn Dannah '18

This past spring, Caryn Dannah graduated from Hope College with degrees in Classical Studies and Church History & Theology. In addition, she was an R.A., President of the Hope College Catholics club, a service trip participant, and a tour guide. Her list of accomplishments while at Hope is impressive, but even more so is her passion for her faith, which has blossomed over the past few years. We took a few minutes to talk to her about the growth of her faith and hear about her exciting next adventure as a full-time missionary at Wayne State University.

How has your faith grown since leaving Catholic Central?

While I was at CC, I was seeking to grow in my faith through the opportunities placed in my path. In the classroom, I was always fascinated by the religion courses offered each year by faithful and thoughtful teachers. Outside of the classroom I was a Peer Ministry leader, volunteered with the Pro-Life club, and was involved in my youth group at St. John Vianney. When I went to Hope a lot changed; I was placed in a new environment with people who came from different denominations. My faith was challenged during my first semester, but during my second semester God placed someone in my path who slowly revealed to me the beauty of the Catholic Church and the importance of a faith-based community. Then I began to meet with Fr. Nick Monco, the campus Chaplain, and Carly, a campus missionary, who connected me with more students in the Catholic community.

What is next for you?

I will be serving as a FOCUS missionary at Wayne State University in Detroit! FOCUS, Fellowship of Catholic University Students, sends a team of missionaries (young adults) to do outreach and evangelization on college campuses across the country. Towards the end of my sophomore year of college, I felt called to pursue a job in ministry. I knew that I wanted to serve people and FOCUS seemed like the perfect next step. To have the opportunity to go to another college campus and walk with students in their faith excites my heart!

You can follow Caryn's journey on her blog:
https://cdannah22.wixsite.com/nunc-coepi

To support Caryn's missionary work go here:
https://www.focus.org/missionaries/caryn-dannah

If you have more questions about FOCUS and supporting Caryn you can email her at caryn.dannah@focus.org

How did you discern that this was the next step for you?

It's rather hard to describe, but I felt God put this call to serve Him on my heart after going to an Encounter Conference in 2020. During Eucharistic Adoration at the conference, I heard God tell me to let go of everything I was clinging to and let Him take over. After this, I changed my major to Theology and knew that He was calling me to serve the Church. Throughout all of this change, I felt peace, a peace that I can't describe but know was from God. Philippians 4:7 sums it well: "Then the peace of God that surpasses all understanding will guard your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus."

What do you think it is that makes FOCUS a particularly good fit for you?

My years at Hope College were very transformative. I went through many highs and lows in life and in my faith. I am thankful for the mentors that walked with me. I believe God is calling me to do the same for others on another college campus. College students enter campus and are experiencing freedom for the first time. There are many beliefs and worldviews being tossed their way. I want to be a light for students and walk with them during their years in college.

What advice do you have for recent high school graduates about how they can preserve their faith while in college?

My advice for recent high school graduates is to keep pursuing Jesus because He is always pursuing you. When you arrive on campus or start a new job after graduating, look for a faithful community on campus or in the local Catholic Church. Seek friends who will walk with you. Also, remember to pray daily. "Rejoice always. Pray without ceasing. In all circumstances give thanks, for this is the will of God for you in Christ Jesus" (1 Thes 5:16-18).

The Catholic Central Choir goes to Italy

This past summer Deacon Dennis and the Catholic Central Choir had the privilege of bringing their singing voices on a pilgrimage across Italy. They began in Assisi, traveled through Tuscany, and ended in Rome. They visited many of Italy's beautiful sacred spaces and even got to sing in a few. What a wonderful opportunity for our students - Grazie a Dio!

music it's who we are

with Band Director, Ann Reinhard,
Alain Sullivan '16 & David Sepulveda '24

Catholic Central Band Director, Ann Reinhard said it best, "Music is part of who we are as humans." Ann has spent the past 22 years fostering the love of music in the lives of thousands of students. Her dedication and impact was evident when talking with Alain Sullivan '16 and current student David Sepulveda. It's simple, the CC band department just wouldn't be the same with Ann Reinhard.

Ann Reinhard

What drives your passion for music?
Music is part of who we are as humans. It reaches everyone in different ways and connects people. That is so important when so much drives us apart. I love the feeling that comes from performing and helping others to experience that for themselves.

What would you say to someone who wants to pursue a career in music?
Music is an awesome thing to pursue. It's also work. I'm not sure everyone realizes the amount of time that music majors and professional musicians continuously put into practicing their craft. However, what is produced after all of that time and work is so special and unique because we are able to share it with others. I think with any career, it's very important to find something that makes you happy. I personally can't imagine anything that could be more fulfilling!

Alain Sullivan '16

When did you start playing music?
I began playing music as part of Mrs. Reinhard's fifth grade band as a clarinetist. I quickly switched over to saxophone and continued my pursuits throughout the rest of middle and high school. I then attended conservatory at the University of Michigan School of Music, Theater and Dance, earning a B.F.A. in Jazz Saxophone with High Honors.

What drives your passion for music?
My passion stems from two main aspects of music-making. First, I am keenly aware that as a jazz musician I am playing a genre of music rooted in the lived experience of the African-American struggle. Whether I am playing jazz, funk, R&B, rock, or other popular music, I try to perform through the lens of the music's ancestors.

Secondly, I have performed in a wide variety of music scenarios and situations. Most recently, I played a traditional Jewish Hora for a wedding. Some other performances include an Indian Raga and traditional Chinese New Year music. These various traditions keep me engaged in learning something new. They also allow me to apply my own personal creative touch that respects history. This is a rewarding experience that has taught me lessons in flexibility and resilience in everything that I do in my life.

My favorite things

with David Sepulveda '24

Since the fifth grade, David has been crafting his music talent of playing the trumpet. If you find yourself at the Cougar Stadium for a football game this fall, you will see David proudly representing the Cougar Marching Band. He is also a member of Catholic Central's Symphonic and Jazz Bands.

My favorite things about Band are ...

1. Mrs. Reinhard, Catholic Central's band director.
2. The opportunities and experiences being a part of the band offers such as solo and ensemble performances, honors band, bandcamp, and more.
3. The overall atmosphere!
